About Our Program
The Intensive Psychodynamic Psychotherapy Center (IPPC) provides diagnostic and intensive treatment services to adults, adolescents, and children (ages 10 and older) who would benefit from intensive treatment. In addition, IPPC strives to meet the need for intensive psychotherapy by offering a greater frequency of sessions and a lengthier therapeutic experience. In dynamic therapy, the client and therapist look at the present and the past, working to foster a more adaptive, gratifying, and productive future.

What is psychodynamic psychotherapy?
Psychodynamic psychotherapy is a treatment modality that aims at gaining a better appreciation of our personal and interpersonal experiences. Individuals are assisted in developing deeper understandings of their past experiences and present behavior. This approach is based on the psychological truism: “One who does not understand the past is condemned to repeat it.”

What does the past have to do with my problems now?
Early relationships influence the people we become, our ways of interacting with others, and our views of the world around us. Gaining insight into our behaviors by becoming more aware influences our ability to become more productive at work, more relaxed during recreation, and more balanced in our social lives.

Who can benefit from the treatment?
Anyone who would like to gain a greater understanding of themselves and how they relate to others would benefit. Seeking help is a sign of good mental health and suggests a willingness to assume responsibility for one’s behavior and a greater capacity to live a mature, dependable, and reliable life.

Services are available to child, adolescent, adult, and elderly clients regardless of race, color, sex, age, nondisqualifying disability, religion or creed, sexual orientation, or national or ethnic origin.

What is the benefit of coming in twice a week?
By coming in twice a week, treatment is more effective, allowing clients to develop greater understandings of their current difficulties, providing for long-lasting growth and psychological development.

What forms of therapy are offered at IPPC?
From a psychodynamic treatment modality, many effective therapy approaches are offered. These therapy approaches include

- individual therapy
- group therapy
- family therapy
- couple therapy

How it works
During sessions, the client is encouraged to reflect on past experiences and to become increasingly introspective to gain a better understanding of his or her needs, wishes, and desires. Understandably, all information shared in treatment is both private and confidential. Clients often report personal thoughts, feelings, fantasies, and dreams that can lead to greater awareness of the magnitude of their core conflicts. By being a sympathetic listener and empathetic facilitator, the therapist accompanies the patient on this voyage of self discovery and personal growth.

Fees
The Psychology Services Center is a fee-for-service facility that provides services at affordable rates.
