

Unforgotten

They came for us in the night
With guns and dogs and hate
They tore us from our homes and lives
And sealed our dreadful fate

They packed us into tight cattle cars
Without food, water, or air
They drove us to the camps of death
Where we faced horror, blood, and despair

They stripped us of our fragile dignity
Our clothes, our hair, our names
They branded us with numbers
And played their cruel, horrific games

They killed six million of our kind
And millions more of others
They tried to wipe us out from the earth
Our parents, sisters, and brothers

But they could not kill our spirit
Our faith, our hope, our love
They could not kill the powerful memories
Of our legacy and our blood

We remember the Holocaust
We honor and we grieve
We educate and we prevent
We live and we believe
